Benjamin: (uneven meter) The Dreamer has been summoned by Pharaoh himself. Walking through the palace halls, Joseph calls all that's happened and where he's been. After two years in the dungeon, he is finally remembered. His trust in God's direction is rewarded once again.

Announcer: (even, but not rap). To Pharaoh, King of Egypt, I present the man called Joseph.

Pharaoh: Arise, young man, and let me tell you just why I've sent for you.

66
My butler tells me that you can interpret dreams and visions And last night in a dream I had exactly two
My dream saw seven healthy cattle grazing by the river. Then from the Nile, in single file came seven more besides.

74
The cows were thin and haggard and their eyes said they were hungry. They snuck up on the fat cows and they swallowed those rawhides.

82
The second dream was stranger. I saw seven giant corn stalks attacked by seven scrawny stalks invading from the South.

Again, the small ones ate the big ones. I cannot understand it. I know a constable comes with ears, but where'd it get the mouth?

Joseph: The future's revealed to Egypt by Almighty God. After seven years of plenty, will come seven famine years.

So my advice to Pharaoh is: Appoint a wise commissioner to store supplies of food before the food all disappears.

105
Pharaoh: God's spirit is upon you, Joseph. Your advice is taken. I make you commissioner. My second in command. God's wisdom must be in you. Arise, take my ring. I give you charge of all the land.
